DESCRIPTION	Kampungs in most South East Asian cities are known as living spaces of poor people for their survival in left over spaces in big cities. However, these kampungs have their own significant contribution to the cities in many aspects, such as history, economics and politics. Therefore, studying kampungs is not only exploring the physical condition, but also understanding their significance in terms of social condition. This pre-conference event, "Regenerating Kampungs", conducted as part of the International Workshop that is organized by Architecture Department of Petra Christian University, Surabaya. This event is a one-day trip to kampungs (about 5 hours) in Surabaya, and would be the first day of the whole four days workshop. This event will explore several kampungs in Surabaya that have strong history with the city of Surabaya, such as Keputran, Ampel, and Bubutan. The organizer will provide workshop kit.
